Protectionism garners fears, little support

By PAMELA LILL

The question of free trade versus protectionism is an issue that has been receiving increased attention from American businesses, consumers and politicians.

Reagan plans trade policy

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Reagan, trying to stave off legislation to protect battered American industries from cheap imports, outlined a refurbished trade policy Monday that is designed to combat unfair trade practices abroad and open foreign markets to U.S. goods.

"I will not stand by and watch American businesses fail because of unfair trading practices abroad," Reagan pledged in a speech to lawmakers and business leaders invited to the White House to hear his announcement. "I will not stand by and watch American workers lose their jobs because other nations do not play by the rules."

But Reagan, who has said quotas or tariffs to protect more expensive domestic products from foreign competition would lead to economic disaster, promised to veto measures "that I believe will harm economic growth, cause loss of jobs and diminish international trade."

The president said he would ask Congress to establish a $300 million war chest to provide grants and loans to "counter our loss of business to trading partners who use what, in effect, are subsidies to deprive U.S. companies of fair access to world markets."

Retaliations the United States takes against individual countries.

Economics Department Chairman Ahmad Murad noted that while President Reagan proposes free (See PROTECTIONISM, page 7)

President Reagan has taken a firm stand advocating free trade and avoiding protectionism. Economists and political scientists have varying opinions concerning the question of free trade vs. protectionism.

In terms of free trade vs. protectionism, the United States is "closer to complete free trade," economics instructor Ebrahim Karbassoon said.

There are some countries that the U.S. imposes tariffs on, such as Nicaragua. Karbassoon said these tariffs are "selective" and more "politically-oriented."

"In theory we support free trade," political science instructor John Faust said, adding that there are certain await their turn for consultation and treatment Monday morning.

Annual 'cold bug' bites campus

A seasonal wave of cold and flu viruses has struck Eastern students again, creating a crowded environment at Health Service.

Health Service Director Jerry Heath said about 300 sick students reported to health service Friday, creating a waiting time of about an hour and a half to see a doctor.

A Health Service official said about 250 students had been to Health Service by mid-afternoon Monday with an average waiting time of an hour and a half each.

Freshman Todd Taylor said although he had to wait only half an hour to see a doctor, he spent about an hour and a half "being sent around to all the different rooms."

"I don't like to miss classes sitting here," he said, adding that he plans to spend more than two hours in Health Service before he is through.

Freshman Therese Fitzgerald also said she had to wait about an hour and a half to see a doctor for treatment of a cold.

"I really don't mind waiting," she said.

"Everyone else has to. I guess there really isn't anything you can do about it."

Although senior Alan Wesch said he had only been waiting about 10 minutes, he said he planned to be there "for some time. But it's all right. It gives me time to study."

Although the lines may appear lengthy, Heath said the number of sick students is normal for this time of year.

"Health Service has the capacity to deal with about 400 people daily and still have things under control," he said adding that the service has treated about 300 students daily for several days.

Although Health Service can only relieve symptoms of colds, not cure the cold, Heath said plenty of rest, eating right and drinking fluids is the best medicine.

However, Heath said the service has a flu vaccine available to students at no charge in attempt to prevent the annual outbreak of the sickness.

Health noted that the viruses causing the outbreaks of colds and flus should "clear up around the first frost."

Concert-goer compares two 'Aid' performances

Original ideas fare better.

At least it seems that way to one FarmAid concert-goer who also attended the Live Aid concert in London this summer.

"Sequels are never as good as their original, and this is more like a sequel to Live Aid," journalism instructor Howard Price said Monday, commenting on Sunday's extravaganza at the University of Illinois Memorial Stadium.

But Price also believes the concept of helping others through concerts or other events is not likely to fade.

"People will come because people like to be there for the music. It's a big chance. How many times does someone in Illinois or Iowa get to see that many groups together?"

The FarmAid concert, organized by country music performer Willie Nelson, was modeled after the Live Aid concert held in two locations—Philadelphia and London—which raised millions of dollars for famine-stricken Africans.

During a January recording session for "We are the World," Nelson mentioned to another artist that it might be nice to help those people struggling "at home." Then, during the July 13 Live Aid concert in Philadelphia, Bob Dylan said he wished some money could be generated for the nation's financially troubled farmers.

Most of the planning for FarmAid was done in less than two months.

Price said many students probably attended the concert because they realized it would be a historic event. Another incentive was the growing list of rock performers on the schedule. However, the diversity in music was a detraction, he said.

Scanning the audience, Price noticed that during performances by some lesser-known country musicians, the younger people in the audience seemed bored and were rude. Older concert-goers also weren't as attentive when rock

Farmers start grading Congress

CHICAGO—A Farmer's Political Report Card will be used to grade members of Congress and other politicians on their efforts in the fight to ease the farm crisis, a bipartisan group of legislators—farmers announced Monday.

"We plan to make the 1986 election in the farm belt a referendum on the American farmer," Nebraska State Sen. Tom Vickers told a news conference after the inaugural meeting of a new farm group.

Vickers, a Democrat, said he organized the new Midwest Emergency Action League, or MEAL, to work for passage of a "good" federal Farm Bill and to reform agricultural policy in a bid to ease pressure on the farm economy.

The state lawmakers who make up the group plan to meet next Monday in Washington, D.C., with Farm Credit Administrator Donald Wilkinson, congressional leaders and officials of the Reagan administration, said Vickers, a Democrat.

Senate race not in Edgar's plans

SPRINGFIELD—Republican Secretary of State Jim Edgar said Monday there's almost no chance he will challenge Democratic U.S. Sen. Alan Dixon in next year's election.

"Anyone who hopes for whatever reason that I will be a candidate for the U.S. Senate, I hope they don't hold their breath," Edgar said at a news conference.

While acknowledging he has discussed with GOP leaders the possibility of a bid for the Senate, Edgar said those who want to see him run "should not take that as an indication that I have a burning desire to run for the U.S. Senate.

Edgar declined to rule out a Senate campaign, but said it's very unlikely because of the potential impact on his family and the difficulty of a race against Dixon. He said he will formally announce in November his political plans for 1986.

Dixon, Edgar's predecessor as secretary of state and one of Illinois' most successful vote-getters, is completing his first term in the Senate.

Youth being tried for murder

BELOIT, Wis.—A 14-year old boy went on trial on delinquency charges Monday in the slaying of a 9-year old who refused to share his bicycle, and jurors were asked whether they doubted that a person so young could commit murder.

None responded when District Attorney James Kaley asked the question during jury selection for the trial of the oldest of the three youngsters accused of beating and stabbing Anthony Darnell Wison.

Circuit judge Patrick Rude emphasized to prospective jurors that the defendant was being tried on a juvenile delinquency petition and was not charged under laws that apply to adults.

The boy died July 26 and his body was found the next day in a lot near his grandparents' home.

A 12-year-old boy also has been charged with delinquency and his trial is scheduled Oct. 14. He is being held at the Rock County Youth Home.

Reagan agrees to lowering dollar, changes administration policies

WASHINGTON (AP)—For years, the Reagan administration discounted the ability of governments to greatly alter the value of currencies, but now it has put together a major international effort to bring the high-flying dollar back to earth.

Many economists were skeptical Monday that the new initiative will succeed.

And even those who were more hopeful said American farmers and businesses won't see any positive benefits for six months or more.

There isn't likely to be much of a downside, either. Efforts to alter currency values to keep American producers competitive—like this weekend's meeting of finance ministers and central bankers in New York City—normally might raise the threat of a new round of inflation, but in this case the experts don't think it will.

At Sunday's surprise meeting, the chief financial officers from the United States, Britain, Japan, West Germany and France agreed to launch a coordinated program to force down the value of the dollar against other major foreign currencies.

When President Reagan took office he announced that he opposed all government efforts—such as this one—to influence the value of currencies. The administration maintained that the marketplace, not governments, should decide such matters.

Because of this view, the administration has only rarely intervened in currency markets: the practice by a government to buy or sell its holdings of a currency to influence the price.

Faced with growing demands for action by Congress, the administration organized the New York meeting to send a signal that it has decided to act more forcefully.

Many economists said the attempt to engineer a drop in the dollar's value is destined to fail.

Survivors found in Mexican ruins

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Rescue workers said Monday they tunneled into the ruins of a government technical school and found 26 survivors of Mexico's two killer earthquakes. They said more people might be alive under the debris.

At a collapsed apartment building, a German shepherd rescue dog named Bobby sniffed and pawed at a spot in the ruins. An hour's digging freed 20-month-old Patricia Aguirres, dehydrated but otherwise unhurt despite being entombed since the quakes Thursday and Friday.

Police and the attorney general's office said the death toll in Mexico City stood at 2,822 on Monday and the president's office said about 100 people were killed elsewhere in Mexico. Police said 4,180 people were missing.

The State Department said in Washington that 3,461 were known dead throughout the area struck by the quakes, including five Americans. There was no immediate explanation of the discrepancy. The State Department said it based its figure on information from Mexican authorities.

Mexico's federal health department said at least 11,000 people were injured by the quakes, which smashed the heart of this city of 18 million people. The number of people left homeless was estimated at 300,000.

President Reagan's wife, Nancy, came on a brief mission of inspection and sympathy, bringing a U.S. government check for $1 million to help in relief efforts.

ACT and SAT scores show gain

NEW YORK (AP) — Hispanic students led the strongest gain in average Scholastic Aptitude Test scores in more than two decades this year, a surge hailed by some educators as evidence that reform is taking hold in public schools.

College Board president George H. Hanford said at a news conference Monday that nationwide average scores rose five points in math to 475.

The combined gain of nine points on the two-part exam, taken annually by about a million college-bound high school students, boosted the average math-verbal score to 906. It was the increase since 1963 when scores also gained nine points before sliding steadily for the next two decades.

The SAT is scored on a scale of 200 to 800, with a combined math-verbal score of 1600 being perfect. It is an entrance requirement at virtually all the nation's selective colleges and universities.

Scores on the ACT, a rival test administered by the American College Testing Program in Iowa City, Iowa; and taken by about a million students mostly in the West and Midwest, also rose in 1985 but only slightly.

One of the highlights of the FarmAid concert, the Beach Boys with Debra Winger sing "Barbara Ann" to the more than 78,000 gathered Sunday in the University of Illinois' Memorial Stadium as a music network cameraman looks on.

FarmAid's message lingers . . .

CHAMPAIGN (AP)—Willie Nelson's huge FarmAid concert is history, but organizers hope its message about the problems of agriculture will linger.

The 14-hour, all-star extravaganza was peppered with information about farming for nearly 80,000 fans on the rain-drenched scene and millions more in the national radio and television audience.

And many of the 1,200 reporters who covered FarmAid gathered enough material to write and broadcast stories for months about the nation's struggling farmers.

That was the plan and it worked.

"FarmAid is a media event. It created an opportunity for awareness," said Robert Soitze, a University of Illinois agricultural economist.

The money raised will be useful but minimal, but the public will understand the situation better."

There were news briefings by agricultural leaders and educators all weekend, there was a press kit from the university stuffed with farm background and there were farmers eager to talk to reporters.

Chuck Ehler even invited a busload of reporters to the 760 acres he farms in Champaign County.

"We want to explain that while we may not be making any great profits, we're going to stay in business," said Ehler. "But the economic problems affect everyone in agriculture. We're all having a difficult time."

Reporters sat on bales of hay in Ehler's machine shed and ate fresh apple and cherry pie as Renny Ehler, who markets her husband's corn and soybeans, described the emotional strain facing many farmers.

"No matter how good it looks like you're doing, you're still losing ground," she said. "What comes in the front door goes right out the back door..."

Reporters saw Ehler's aging John Deere tractor and combine, watched corn being harvested and talked with his banker, bookkeeper, market adviser, in-out supplier and neighbors.

"It's a real scary time," said Lin Warfel, who farms 950 acres on the other side of the county.

"We have a real communication problem in agriculture. Public policy has helped get us in trouble and public policy reflects, to some extent, public awareness."

Back in town, at a hotel conference room, a panel of UI agricultural economists talked hard numbers with reporters.

One of them, David Lins, said of the 679,000 commercial-sized farms in the United States, one-third face serious economic trouble.

. . . policy intervention resented

CHAMPAIGN (AP)—Illinois Agriculture Director Larry Werries, wandering the FarmAid concert site Sunday, said he appreciated what the musicians were trying to do but that he wished benefit organizers would stop trying to dictate government farm programs.

"I'd like to cut a deal with the entertainers," Werries said. "I won't sing if they don't tell me how to determine farm policy."

Werries reacted to statements by country singer Willie Nelson, FarmAid's prime mover, who wants to promote proposed farm legislation set for a vote this week in the U.S. Senate.

That proposal, sponsored by Sen. Thomas Harkin, D-Iowa, is opposed by the nation's largest farmers' organization, the American Farm Bureau.

"This bill comes up Thursday (for a vote), and we're asking everybody to call their legislators and at least give it a shot," Nelson said. "It's not going to be easy to pass it and it might not even happen."

Nelson, singer Neil Young and the American Agriculture Movement contend the measure would raise farmers' profits by 30 percent, while increasing consumer prices by only 3 to 5 percent.

Murder possible in student death

By JIM ALLEN
City editor

Murder charges are pending in the death of a 23-year-old Eastern student found in a Charleston trailer Monday, Charleston Police Chief Maurice Johnson said.

Part-time Eastern junior Jane Manbeck, 2415 Terrace Lane, was discovered at approximately 7:30 p.m. by Charleston police officers answering an ambulance call at the trailer of James Seeley, 30, 1700 Adams, Johnson said.

"Seeley has been taken into custody and is being held at the Coles County (Jail), pending the formal filing of charges of murder," Johnson said in a prepared statement.

The exact cause of death is pending the results of an autopsy which will be performed at the Springfield Memorial Medical Center Tuesday, Coles County Coroner Dick Lynch said.

Manbeck was pronounced dead at 7:40 p.m. at Sarah Bush Lincoln Health Center, Lynch said.

The autopsy results will not be released for at least two to three weeks, Lynch said, adding that he believed the death did occur in the trailer where the body was found.

The investigation into the woman's death is continuing by the Charleston Police, the State Police Bureau of Crime Scene Services and the Coles County States Attorney's office, Johnson said.

Manbeck was the daughter of retired Eastern instructor Maurice Manbeck.

Senate discusses BOG makeup

By TERI BROWN
Staff writer

The Faculty Senate Tuesday will continue its discussion on the proposed shift from the executive structure of the Board of Governors system to a chancellorship.

The Senate tabled the item at last week's meeting for further discussion of the matter.

However, most Senate members were opposed to the new BOG restructuring at last week's meeting because of concerns that the university presidents would be left with less power.

Currently, an executive director heads the BOG system.

With a chancellor, all BOG presidents would report and be responsible to a chancellor. Currently, the president of each BOG school, including Eastern, Northeastern, Western, Chicago State and Governor's State, report only to the board.

The Senate questioned the proposal, worrying that a chancellor would be able to give orders to the president, reducing the president to a "figuredhead."

According to amendments to the BOG bylaws, the chancellor will be responsible for coordinating and managing all system-wide matters while presidents maintain "primary responsibility" for the management of the individual universities.

Eastern President Stanley Rives said the BOG favors the change because it believes the board is "operating at a competitive disadvantage," since all of the other Illinois universities are governed under the chancellor system.

'Chancellor' won't add to BOG's clout

To restructure the Board of Governors based on nothing more than the belief it will strengthen the board's clout is short-sighted.

The board is preparing to vote at its next meeting on an amendment that would form a new position, "chancellor," and eliminate the current "executive director." Proponents say the name change would amplify the board's voice.

What it would really do, as critics like Eastern President Stanley Rives correctly point out, is tighten the collars of system presidents, in effect bestowing them with the clerical duties of making sure the chancellor's directives are carried out.

Instead of reporting to the board, presidents would report to a chancellor, who in turn would deal with external groups like the General Assembly. The new position would take power from both the board and the presidents.

Presumably, a chancellor would control the board's agenda. Also, if a president would want to lobby on his own, he would not be on the up and up.

In the past, Eastern has had some success in pushing its own cause. Most recently, Rives and State Rep. Mike Weaver, a former Eastern business instructor, were able to secure state funds for a proposed annex to Coleman Hall for the College of Business.

Depending on the BOG to achieve similar, quick results has long been frustrating for Eastern, the system's most consistently underfunded university. Changing a title is unlikely to bring about miracles.

Among legislators questioned Friday by The Daily Eastern News, most seemed to favor the new plan because, as one said, "it's easier to deal with one person."

Under the assumption that one person would make matters more convenient for legislators, discussion and dissent would naturally be bad. The board, without debate, would then be very one-sided.

The current system has its faults. But our train of thought on this issue is similar to Rives': For any system to work, it depends entirely upon how well its leaders perform their duties.

More analysis needed before status of 'debtor nation' can be confirmed

A great deal of apprehension and confusion has been caused by the news that the United States has become a debtor country. The media is much to be blamed for contributing to this obfuscation. It must be noted at the outset that this situation will not cause any problem for the United States at least in the short run. However, it has the potential of wreaking instability, if it continues in the long run.

Much of the confusion stems from the lack of understanding about the indebtedness situation. The United States became a debtor country because the foreign investment in the United States surpassed its own investments in foreign countries. It is not the first time that this country assumed a net debtor position. During the Second World War period and then before 1915 the United States' balance of indebtedness (the statement summarizing the investment situation) had been negative. What is different about the current debt is that it is coupled with a deficit in the balance of payments. To make any analytical judgment about this problem we will have to view the situation more thoroughly.

Two immediate problems that have arisen are liquidity and insolvency. When the short term liquid investment of the United States fell behind the short term liquid investment of the foreigners, the country was faced with the liquidity problem. However, liquidity has been a problem for the United States for quite some time. It destabilizes the economy only when there is a sudden withdrawal of short term investment by the foreigners. Given then robust health of the United States economy, such a happening is highly unlikely. The sound United States economy will also obviate the occurrence of insolvency. Beyond these problems the persistence of a deficit in the long term investment will cause structural problems that may destabilize the economy. If this is concomitant with a deficit in the balance of payments an erosion of confidence in the United States economy will necessarily follow. This will have a far reaching effect.

Viewpoint:

At this juncture an important point about the balance of indebtedness should be made. Although this statement is quite useful it may give wrong signals about the debt situation. Some of the United States' investment in this statement are not evaluated at the current market rate. Instead they are evaluated at the original value minus depreciation, therefore at the current rate we may not even be in a debtor position.

But what ever the reality is, the situation warrants a serious policy discussion. It would unequivocally involve the reduction in the balance of payments' deficit, but without following the protectionist line. Protectionism attacks the syndrome but not the malady. We have enhanced the competitiveness of the American products in the end. It is almost a cliché, but our second line of attack has to be on the burgeoning federal budget deficit. The borrowings of the federal government pushes the interest rates up which attracts foreign capital.

But before the capital reaches the United States it has to be converted into dollars. An increase in the value of dollar makes our imports cheaper and exports expensive. The rest has become a matter of common knowledge.

So the innocuous nature of the United States' international debt may be quite deceptive. It has the potential to debilitate the economy for a considerable length of time and as such we should pay immediate attention to it.

—Dr. Ali Arshad is an assistant professor of Economics at Eastern.

Cops nab pellet prankster

By JIM ALLEN
City editor

An Eastern student was arrested and charged Monday with reckless conduct after he confessed to shooting pellets with a slingshot, striking pedestrians, police said.

Robert Wilson, 21, 1509 Second St., posted $100 bond and is to appear in court in October for "incidents in which several individuals were struck with pellets while walking along Lincoln Avenue," according to Charleston Police Chief Maurice Johnson.

While Wilson confessed, he said Monday the number of people hit was "inaccurate." Johnson said four people were struck, but Wilson said only two people were involved.

"It all started out, me and my fraternity brothers were just playing around and a couple shots went astray," Wilson said. "Our (Phi Sigma Epsilon) alumni president explained what happened and I took responsibility for it."

"I know I did the wrong thing but I'm happy I did the right thing in going to the police department, because that's the right and honest thing to do," Wilson added.

Wilson said he did not know who the victims were. Johnson would not release any names, but he said no one was seriously injured in the incidents.

City moves on resolutions

By JIM ALLEN
City editor

Charleston's City Council Tuesday will consider resolutions concerning Eastern's Homecoming and taking over maintenance of Fourth Street.

The council will also discuss authorizing the demolition of a "dilapidated and abandoned" house on Sixth Street.

In gearing up for the Charleston Fall Festival and Eastern Homecoming festivities on Oct. 5, the council is expected to approve the necessary one-day street closings on the downtown square and on Lincoln Avenue.

Also on the council agenda is a resolution to approve acquiring maintenance of Fourth Street, currently maintained by the state. The council was hesitant to accept maintenance at an earlier meeting, but is now citing in its updated resolution the Illinois Department of Transportation's proposal for improvements by 1989.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the Council Chambers in the Municipal Building.

Students may purchase books at Textbook Library

By PAULA BONDUELLE
Staff writer

Students will be allowed to purchase textbooks that have been checked out to them for the fall semester until Nov. 8 at the Textbook Library.

Textbook Library Director Richard Sandefer said most textbooks that are purchased are "simply for the students' personal use."

"Most books are purchased in the areas of accounting, speech pathology and chemistry," Sandefer said. "These areas in particular seem to draw the most interest."

To purchase textbooks, Sandefer said students should bring the book they are interested in owning to the library and it will be assessed for damages to determine the cost.

Sandefer noted that the book's cost can vary according to its age and condition.

Although he said newer books can range in cost from $25 to $30, Sandefer said older books that may have been checked out ten times are priced from $2 and up.

"The average price would be about $12 to $14, but that isn't indicative of the price of any particular book," he added.

Sandefer said there is no indication of how many textbooks are purchased each year. "There really isn't an average number of purchases just as there isn't an average book that is most popular."

Textbooks may be purchased at the Textbook Library at the south end of Pemberton Hall between 8 a.m. and noon and between 1 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

musicians took the stage.

"Live Aid was better because it was all rock. At FarmAid there was a mix and I don't think it went over well."

Some musicians who performed Sunday, however, were excited about the diversity.

Performer Tanya Tucker said during an afternoon press conference the audience was responding well.

"The crowd's great. I think what's so great about this is people from different parts of the music industry are all here for the same reason—to help American farmers.

Sammy Hagar, who appeared in the press tent with Eddie Van Halen, said, "There's a great energy here and the great thing is that it's a diversified energy."

Price was in London at the time of the Live Aid concert for a seminar on British mass media.

Price thought the audience at Live Aid was a little more excited than the one at FarmAid, but like the 78,000 FarmAid concert-goers, caught up in the entertainment rather than the cause that prompted the event.

Price admits he "went for the music. It's a good cause, but I don't think I would have donated that much."

And if someone else orchestrates another aid concert, Price might be part of the crowd again.

"But afterward, I'll probably think I should have stayed home maybe and watched it on TV."

trade, the Congress seems to favor protectionism.

"I personally feel that free trade is much better than any protection we can devise," he said.

Political Science Chairman Larry Thorsen is "not in favor of raising tariffs or providing other forms of protection with the exception of government subsidies to industry."

Ultimately what needs to be done, Thorsen said, is to find more markets for what we produce. "Find things that are saleable," he said.

One reason consumers oppose protectionism is that Americans can get goods much cheaper from the outside, Murad said. "They do a better job than we can do," he said.

American industries need to work on improving productivity, Murad said. "By improving productivity we can produce goods cheaply."

If protectionist measures were taken, American industries would not be interested in increasing productivity, Murad said.

Protectionism, Karbassioon said, would also be more expensive to the domestic consumer. Karbassioon agrees with Murad in that free trade would encourage domestic productivity, thereby reducing costs.

"I think we rely too much on the global market for our agriculture. We need to work more in terms of the American market," Faust said.

Some American businesses argue that protectionism should be instated as a retaliatory measure for the taxes and tariffs foreign countries charge. However, there is the possibility that American businessmen overestimate what they could do if there were less restrictions, Faust said.

"They are not familiar enough with marketing processes in countries such as Japan," he added.

Iris Campbell, acting director of the Charleston Chamber of Commerce, said protectionism is not the answer. "In many ways we'd be hurting ourselves," she said.

James Withers, executive director of the Urbana Chamber of Commerce, agreed. "I just think open and free trade is the way to go," he said. "We need them as bad as they need us."

Panthers take win
with sigh of relief

The gust of wind which hit at 0:22 of the fourth quarter Saturday wasn't due to the 20 mph blasts which had swept across O'Brien Stadium all afternoon.

It came quite opposite from the prevailing winds that re-directed two Evan Arapostathis field goal attempts against a spirited Saginaw Valley squad.

This particular gust was preceded by a dead calm. Saginaw quarterback Mike Leibinger had just directed the Cardinals from their own 22 to the Eastern 22 in the waning minutes, leaving the uneasy home side of O'Brien holding its breath with a 35-27 lead that was looking more erasable with every snap.

Leibinger had a first down at Eastern's 22 with, ironically, 22 seconds remaining. He took his drop and gave a quick look into the end zone where he fired, of all numbers, his 22nd pass attempt of the day.

The home side of the stadium had no right fearing for its season at that point, three games into the year. After all, this quarterback was from Saginaw Valley, a tiny NAIA school playing its first game ever against a I-AA foe.

Yet there this team lurked, still with an opportunity to humble Eastern, no matter that a tie was the best they'd be able to do. Even the strong-at-heart were excused now if they were seen holding their temples, a la Panther coach Al Molde.

This was no Excedrin headache quite yet, but the Panthers certainly needed relief.

When cornerback Brian Newby found himself holding on to Leibinger's 22nd attempt, the 90-some players and 5,016 fans let out a sigh that some say changed the direction of that enormous new flag in the south end zone.

It was the last of several relieved exhalations which prevailed from the west. From all indications, this contest was to be a blowout. The only problem was Saginaw Valley threatened to do the blowing away.

"We really dodged a bullet," Molde said, peering up from his slumped position, sounding like a gracious war general.

The Panthers should be used to being the target which every team's sight and barrel is aimed at. With its winning tradition and rich playoff history, Eastern Illinois is specially marked on almost every opponent's schedule.

That may be precisely the problem. Opponents are licking their chops for Eastern before the season even kicks off. The Panthers, on the other hand, have found themselves suffering from an acute case of "up-and-down mentality," as Molde diagnosed it.

What, then, is the formula that makes a team ready to play week in and week out? Sean Payton has passed for more than 300 yards in 11 of his 14 games started, evidence enough that he always seems ready to play. So what's the secret, Sean?

"You've got to be ready to play but you can't be totally high for every game," Payton said, coming off his highest game ever, 509 yards passing.

"When you've got 11 games on your schedule it's impossible to be totally 100 percent ready to play each one. The important thing is to come out winners."

Slotback Calvin Pierce, the bucking bronco of the Panther offense, explained Eastern's preparation problem with Saturday's first quarter a typical example.

"Those first two touchdowns were on talent only. I think if we'd been ready to play it would have been 30-something to nothing in the first quarter alone."

Instead they were wiping their brow in relief. After three games, they've made it clear this is no team for the faint-of-heart. Nobody can predict their next move, but they'll never be accused of being monotonous.

Payton first Panther named
Gateway player-of-the-weekBy TIM LEE
Staff writer

Eastern quarterback Sean Payton became the first Panther to be named player-of-the-week Monday in the newly-formed Gateway Football Conference.

Not surprisingly, Payton was named offensive player-of-the-week on the basis of his record-setting performance Saturday in the Panthers' 35-27 win over Saginaw Valley.

Payton burned several school records, completing 40 of 58 passes for 509 yards. He also threw for four touchdowns.

Payton also helped Eastern break a 16-year-old school record for total offense with 676 yards, eclipsing the old mark of 656. Payton accounted for 507 yards.

"We should have scored a lot more points with all the yards we gained," Payton said Monday from practice.

"I think that our quick (two touchdown) start had a negative effect on us," he said. "We relaxed and they made a great comeback with three touchdowns before the half."

Payton's 509 yards passing and 40 completions set new team and individual highs in Division I-AA this season.

"We moved the ball well but we had some trouble punching it in," he said. "I'm just glad we got out of there with a win."

Payton also gave credit to his offensive counterparts for the award.

"DuWayne (Pitts) had a great game for us," Payton said about the Panther running back who rushed for 169 yards. "When we were watching the films you could see how great of a game he did have."

MARK E. LARSEN/Staff photographer

Panther quarterback Sean Payton lets one loose in his assault on the record books in Saturday's 35-27 victory over Saginaw Valley. Payton was named Gateway Conference player-of-the-week for his efforts.

"Calvin (Pierce) and Roy (Banks) also had an incredible day for us," he said. "Those two and DuWayne are three of the best athletes on the team."

Payton also was named the ESPN Player-of-the-Day, an award he cannot really appreciate.

"We don't even have cable in our home yet," Payton said. "I didn't even know about it until a couple of my friends told me."

Payton believes there will be more on the line in Saturday's game with Southern Illinois than in any previous game this year.

"The records can be thrown out the window," Payton said. "There will be a lot of bragging rights at stake."

Payton was named the Mid-Continent Player-of-the-Week on three different occasions last year and won the award once the year before.

Eastern's volleyball team will have an opportunity to avenge one of its two losses this season Tuesday when the Panthers travel to the University of Illinois-Chicago.

Eastern, 11-2 with a modest two-match win streak, will be seeking revenge from a loss to the Flames in the championship of the Lady Tiger Classic early this season.

"This is probably the toughest week we've had so far," Eastern coach Betty Ralston said. "If you take the week from Tuesday to Tuesday, we have six tough matches."

"These kind of weeks can either make you or break you; we could go 0-6, you never know. We at least have to try and go 4-2."

Eastern will enter the Illinois-Chicago contest just 10 players deep. Freshman setter Diane Lessner sustained a sprained ankle in Friday's practice and is not expected to return until this weekend's DePaul Invitational.

Eastern is already without the services of outside hitter Sue Miloch who is recovering from mononucleosis.

Ralston plans to continue to use her entire squad, as she has done all season.

"We are only as strong as our bench," Ralston said. "A lot of players are getting valuable experience that will hopefully help when the Gateway (Conference) season starts."

Although the Panthers won't play in Lantz Gym, Tuesday's game could in essence be called a "home match." Eight of Eastern's 12 players are from the Chicago area.

"We always tend to play well in Chicago and I hope that continues," Ralston said.

Last week's Gateway Player-of-the-Week Maura LeFevour leads the balanced Eastern attack with a .333 hitting percentage. The Oak Park-River Forest graduate also is the team leader in block solos (23) and is tied for second in block assists (23).

Co-captains Misty Buckhold and Judy Planos add .254 and .253 hitting percentages, respectively. Last week, Planos moved into fourth-place on Eastern's career kill list with 594.
